During the thunder storm of Monday night a bolt of electricity struck the house of James Mathers doing a considerable amount of damage, but fortunately without loss of life to the occupants. The bolt passed down the dining room chimney, entered the kitchen and after shattering numerous places passed to the ground, strange as it may appear not a trace of fire could be seen on its track.

PRIMARIES SHOCK THE COUNTY SEAT

Grundy's Defeat Has Stunned His Subordinates, as Roosevelt Campaign in the County Was Looked Upon as a Joke.

Doylestown, April 17.

At last the primary election is over and other subjects will now engage the minds of the people. At the county seat it was very quiet and uneventful except in results, some of which were surprising. By one thirty almost all of the election boards were ready for work and the familiar faces of the workers and window book men were all present, with a few extras owing to the family fight in both parties. The rush of voters commenced as soon as the polls were opened and continued steadily to the close. Teams and automobiles were pressed into service and every voter hunted up with as much care as at the November election, resulting in a very heavy poll of voters. It was funny to watch some of the regular workers in both parties, who, instead of fighting and carefully watching their ancient opponents, had to be on guard against those of their own household. Then, too, there was the irrepressible voter who had friends in both parties and demanded both ballots, becoming very angry when told he could have only one and in some cases not vote at all.

Of course the Congressional nomination contest was the centre of attraction and up to ten days ago was believed to be the only one worthy of consideration, the candidacy of the Roosevelt delegates up to that time being looked upon more as a joke than the exceedingly serious proposition it turned out to be afterwards. It was expected that Bean would have a small majority at the county seat, and firmly believed that Grundy would have them all, and when that situation was reversed and Bean came out with one hundred and thirty majority over Eastburn while Grundy had to pike along with only eighty-two, it began to look as though the end to all things had come; and when two Roosevelt candidates for delegates to the State convention were only sixty-two behind the low Grundy man why the average party man was all at sea; then on top of that, when the news came from Duke Pollock's private secretary, that Doylestown township, the home of the faithful, that ten majority was the best they could do for Grundy over Foster, then heads began to shake; and then on top of that the Grundy low man was only seven ahead of the high Roosevelt man, tongues began to wag and it was quietly whispered that there was a strong prospect of Joe disciplinaring the Duke and setting up a new regime at the County Home, for the Duke openly and publicly went down to Philadelphia last week to see and hear the redoubtable Teddy, and did his share of the cheering and helped make enthusiasm.

The defeat of Grundy and Johnson is a severe blow to the machine and already the independents are preparing to make overtures looking to the nomination of a fusion ticket, one that will not take orders from Penrose nor advice from Grundy. The old timers are keeping very quiet and the men closest to the Boss are not saying a word until they get orders from headquarters.

To put it mildly they are disorganized by the terrible shock. Of course Grundy carries the county owing materially to the numerous trips of his right hand man, Pete. Pete believes in getting all angles of view of the situation and has even interested himself in Democratic affairs sufficiently to secure desired information and to make his combinations safe but the ship is sinking and the time has come to get off. Where will Pete be next year?

Among the Democrats Boas carried the county seat by seven. Neis, organizer, was high man as Steinegate with Barrett, regular, second. Had the decision been left to the county seat the delegates would have stood six to four in favor of the reorganizers, but the regulars have swept the county outside of the county seat by about a thousand majority and as Anders has carried Montgomery county by a still larger majority he will be the party representative at the Baltimore contention.

The "County Seat Centennial and Old Home Week," celebration is gradually assuming shape and will be an assured success. The Pageant and Historial Tableaux for Wednesday will be exceedingly attractive and with the costume ball at the armory in the evening will make a most attractive day to most people.

The North Penn League has disbanded and all of the teams will now play ball independently. Manager Mitch of the county seat has already signed up a promising bunch of youngsters and, if he can succeed in keeping Connie Mack from pilfering his stars, expects to have a bunch of winners. Games will be played with the other teams of the old League on a guarantee basis and several all star aggregations will be secured for the afternoons of "Old Home Week" as an additional attraction to the many visitors who are expected to be in town at that time. There is plenty of good baseball material here, all it wants is an old band with inside baseball experience to produce a team that will make them all go.

ever in the history of the county seat have so many houses been given a fresh coat of paint, yards fixed up and a general overhauling taken place, as this spring. House painters are working over time and have plenty of orders booked to keep them busy for some time to come. Labor is at a premium at the county seat and it is with difficulty it is secured. Even Street Commissioner Holcomb has to work short handed.

Work on the new school building has been commenced and is rapidly progressing. Contractor Seth Good has a large force of men excavating for the foundation and quite an amount of material is ready to be used as soon as the foundations have been completed. It will be the handsomest and most convenient school building in the county when completed and will be a most comfortable home for the county seat schools.

County Superintendent, J. Harry Hoffman, is the proud possessor of a brand new spick and span automobile. One day this week the Philadelphia papers printed a statement that Harry Hoffman had run over a man in that city and that the unfortunate individual was dead. Prof. Hoffman's friends began to mourn for his unfortunate experience in his new venture, when he turned up with his machine, safe and sound and relieved their minds by telling them that it was the other fellow with the same name.

The spring session of borough council on Monday night was long and at times thrilling. The waste of water by consumers was again the subject of discussion and as usual was left without being settled. Numerous cases of extra spigots and other use of the water that is not being paid for are well known facts and the councilmen know of them but alas, all of the people whom they have knowledge of are personal friends or deal with them, so nothing is done. Nearly 2000 feet of new water main will be laid in consequence of the anexation of additional territory and the streets will receive a thorough overhauling. Before the next meeting, unless all signs fail, the life of the tagless dog will be made a burden to him and he will make his exit by asphyxiation. The question of street hucksters, some of whom are becoming an annoyance, occupied considerable time and the question of licensing them was continued to the dim and far distant future. Two nuisances were reported but as abatement was promised by the offenders, nothing was done. The members were enthusiastic over Old Home Week and will materially aid it.

Miss Ida Hatcher, of Atlantic City, Mrs. Harry Johnson and daughter, Lila, of Morrisville, and Neeper Watson were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watson last week.

Lewis Satterthwaite, who was hauling a load of corn stalks, stopped at the postoffice for his mail, his mules became frightened and ran, overturning the stalks in the street. Fortunately the wagon was not broken, so the stalks were reloaded and he was able to proceed.

Curious Benefits of Drought.

Drought is dreaded by farmers and gardeners because it injures grass and grain, fruits and flowers, but scientific observers testify that it brings as a compensation subtle gifts which enrich the soil and increase future crops. Nature has stored in the earth a rich supply of phosphates, silicates, carbonates and other chemical salts essential to vegetable life. Those on the surface of of the ground are soon exhausted, and the large supply at greater depths is often unreached by subsoil plowing. But a drought is nature's subsoil plow to bring up the rich nutriment below. When the surface is parched the sun draws moisture from the deeper soil, and this moisture brings with it in solution salts of lime and magnesia, of potash and soda. The moisture evaporates, but leaves the salts for the use of plants and grain. Drought, therefore, does a double work. It parches the surface and lessens the present crop. It forces up rich nutriment from the deeper soil and enlarges future crops.—Harper's Weekly.

The Lydd of Lyddite.

Lyddite, the powder that has such enormous explosive force and that can be fired from a gun which is easily carried about, does not, as has been widely supposed, take its name from a man, but from an ancient town near the coast of Kent, in England—the town of Lydd, where there is a government artillery range. Here the tests were made that resulted in the preparation of this explosive, and the name of the peaceful Kentish village is now associated with a substance that has dealt out death to thousands. It has other odious qualities besides its explosive force, since its fumes are so suffocating as sometimes to be intolerable. Lydd shares the notoriety which attaches to the name of Dumdum, that other peaceful city, in distant Bengal, where are manufactured the expanding bullets that Great Britain has used from time to time.—Harper's Weekly.

St. Andrews' Bottle Dungeon.

St. Andrews is perhaps the most distinctive of the old castle towns of Scotland. It was built early in the thirteenth century, and it was here that Bishop Kennedy showed James II. how to break the power of his nobles by taking a bundle of arrows, separating them and slapping them one by one. In Stewart Dick's "The Pageant of the Forth" the author says: "Under the sea tower, in the heart of the rock where it juts into the sea, is a grewsome dungeon known as the 'Bottle dungeon,' so called from its shape. In the floor of the lower room in the tower is a hole five feet in diameter. Down it goes for nearly twelve feet. The neck of the bottle then widens out to form a chamber nearly twenty-four feet in breadth. There is no light, no ventilation, no exit of any kind but the neck of the bottle. A prisoner there had no more chance of escape than a crab has in a creel."

A Hindu Dinner Party.

A Hindu ladies' dinner begins at 12 o'clock and lasts two hours. But the guests begin to assemble some time before the dinner, for the simple reason that they have to go into the garden and choose their own fruit and vegetables. Meat, by the way, is forbidden. The chief dish at a dinner party is composed of rice and maize. The guests sit on the floor in two rows, facing one another, and eat with their fingers. The most esteemed widow lady present hands round the dishes, and this service is considered a great honor. Cocoanut milk and various kinds of sherbet are drunk. When the meal is over the ladies take a small portion of betel nut wrapped in "pan" leaves. Pan is a green leaf something like laurel and is prepared in no fewer than eighty different ways. Each of these ways is supposed to give a different emotion to the eater.

The Decline of Winchester.

Winchester for five centuries was the active rival of London, and for 400 years English parliaments occasionally sat in the castle, which contains the round table of King Arthur. It was a city with great temples and the site of the first Christian church in Britain. Its buildings were of the most magnificent character, and pilgrims flocked from far and near to the magnificent cathedral which contained the body of St. Swithin and where many miracles were worked.

William the Conqueror and Charles II. had palaces here, and within the monastery were buried King Alfred, his queen and two sons. Winchester has indeed fallen upon evil days, for at the present time its population is only the same as it was in the days of Henry II.—Sheffield (England) Telegraph.

Slips of the Tongue.

In a case tried before a magistrate in Glasgow the defending agent made reference to a verbal agreement between the parties. "Let's see yer verbal agreement," the magistrate said. "Hand it up here."

At a parish council meeting, when a petition for some increase of wages was under consideration, the chairman said peevishly: "A canna mak' head nor tail o' this dockyment. It's jist like Alphy and Omegy—it's got neither beginning nor end."—Glasgow Herald.

The Steeplechase.

The first steeplechases were literally "chases to a steeple." The earliest we can discover was a match in 1752 between Edmund Blake and Mr. O'Callaghan over four and a half miles of stiff country between the church of Buttevant and St. Leger church spire.—London Tatler.

Next Thing to It.

A MIGHTY VICTORY.

On last Saturday afternoon between the hours of two and eight o'clock in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania an imperial political dynasty was wrecked from centre to circumference.

A political organization which has remained intact and which exercised monarchial powers for probably a half-century today is completely annihilated.

From Simon Cameron to Don Cameron, to M. S. Quay, to Boies Penrose, the sceptre of power has been successively handed down and the Republican State organization during all these regimes has successfully withstood all assaults until the fatal date of April 13, 1912.

The engulfing Roosevelt flood at the primaries on Saturday carried with it to utter destruction every vestige of an intolerant political machine. The people as one mighty unit arose and delivered a smashing blow that will go down in history as one of the most remarkable achievements ever accomplished in the political world.

It was a grand and glorious victory!

To our esteemed local contemporary: "Who's looney now?"

The time is propitious for Editor Addison to haul down from the mast-head of his editorial column the insignia "For President of United States, William Howard Taft, of Ohio." We believe that this expression of sentiment, so publicly displayed, was one of the strong elements which combined to defeat his ambition for nomination for the Assembly.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Our local contemporary, the Daily Courier, makes a serious accusation of violation of the law against the saloons of Bristol, a charge which Judge Ryan, in the performance of his duty, should take cognizance of, as he will soon hold license court when these proprietors, whom the Courier charges with being violators of the law, will be making applications for license renewals.

In the leading editorial in Wednesday's issue, the Courier, in commenting upon the arrest of a drunken [illegible] P who created a disturbance on the street, says:

"The cause of the trouble must be sought in the saloon. There is a law against the sale of intoxicating beverages to men already under the influence, but we have good reason to believe that it is more honored in the breach than in the observance by certain saloon keepers.

"NOT ONLY DO THEY SELL TO DRUNKEN MEN, but it is alleged by people who are in a position to know, that MINORS HAVE NO TROUBLE BUYING INTOXICATING DRINKS.

Assessments have advanced the verdict seems to be that the consumers are guilty, and the fine will be collected at once.

Among the slain at the primary battle on Saturday afternoon was Joseph S. Grundy, of Bristol, leader of the Republican party of the Eighth Congressional District, who aspired for the honor of representing his constituents. The honor was denied him by his own organization, who preferred Byram Foster, also of this borough. Mr. Grundy cannot attribute his defeat to the "kickers" and Independent Republicans. They were denied the privilege of participating in the Republican primaries. Only "organization" votes were allowed to vote. In Bucks County Bean's majority for Congress was two thousand, Grundy's was five hundred or less. If the latter had held up his end in Bucks he would have been elected despite Montgomery county's defection.

The great Roosevelt victory at the primaries last Saturday means the passing of Penrose and his machine. Progressive Republicans will control the State Convention at Harrisburg on May 1. A Progressive Republican will succeed Penrose as member of the National committee. The State committee will be chosen from the ranks of the Progressives and a Progressive Republican will be made chairman of that committee. The convention will nominate four Congressmen-at-large who will represent the new idea in Pennsylvania politics, and twelve Roosevelt delegates will be elected to go to the National Republican convention at Chicago. Pretty good work for a matinee performance.

In a steamer burned on Long Island Sound, but finally beached without loss of life the women are said to have behaved with more coolness than the men. It is a better argument for suffrage than breaking windows with hammers.

The Underwood revision of the wool schedule has passed the House with twenty progressive Republicans voting for it. This measure proposes an average reduction of about 50 per cent. At the same time Mr. Payne, for the standpat Republicans, introduced a bill cutting duties about 40 per cent.

Two conclusions follow. The first is that events have confirmed the country's belief that the revision of 1909 was a sham; the second that the LaFollette Bill of last summer was justified by the conditions of production at home and abroad, and ought now to be law.

The Rhode Island Legislature has passed a law compelling railways operating in that state to give every member of the the Legislature a pass. But this is not a hardship in Rhode Island, where the Capitol is within "easy walking distance" of all parts of the state.

The general public, the chief sufferer in strikes, grows more tired every year of the victimizing operation in which employers and workmen make money, and the great mass of consumers get nothing but busines interruption and other losses.

"Well, Jones, did you have any luck on your hunting trip?" "Simply wretched; didn't kill a thing. "I'm sorry I didn't go motoring instead."

THE OCEAN HORROR.

The dangers of the sea are still there.

The Titanic, the latest specimen of "perfection" in ship building, the largest, costliest, staunch to the point of being "unsinkable," went to the bottom of the Atlantic in less time than many a little old wooden ship.

Unless the indications fail, the Titanic seems to have been a victim of speedmania, and the delusion fostered by the steamship companies that all danger in ocean travel has been removed by the building of the modern type of passenger boat.

The other element, which cannot be eliminated until the facts prove it beyond all question, is that some one was careless in the face of grave danger, possibly lulled by the fancied security of unsinkableness.

The loss of life is appallingly piteous. That 1,500 souls should be plunged into eternity without warning, roused from a slumber that was looked upon as just as safe as the sleep in a bed ashore is a sickening thought.

What has happened to the Titanic may happen any day to any of the other "unsinkable" ocean palaces.

The fate of the Titanic is the proof that the supposed security is mainly to lull the fears of timid passengers.

Something was lacking. What it was we may never know. But the Titanic was not the safe boat she was promised to be by her owners. If she had no means of detecting the presence of icebergs in her vicinity she was unsafe. If the staunchness of watertight compartments is entirely theoretical, none of the big liners are any safer than the marine giant that today lies at the bottom of the Atlantic. If the proper lookout for icebergs in the iceberg field was not maintained with regard for the safety of the lives of thousands of people aboard the big ship—well, that becomes criminal, or dangerously close to the criminal, whether the vessel was sacrificed to the craze for speed on her maiden trip or not.

GIVIL COURTS

Proceedings of the April Term at Doylestown. Two Judges at Work.

There was a large attendance at the Civil and Equity Court, which opened Monday morning with Judge William C. Ryan on the bench.

Judge Ryan stated that Judge Telford, of Indiana, would not be present until Tuesday morning.

OPINIONS BY JUDGE STAPLES.

In the estate of Morris O'Neal, late of Yardley, Judge Staples filed an opinion and made an order that the report of the auditor be referred back.

In the estate of Sarah Garren, late of Newtown, Judge Staples handed down the opinion on the exceptions of the auditors' report ordering the report sent back for re-statement. The Clerk of the Orphans' Court is to receive no extra compensation.

APPOINTED GUARDIAN.

The Bristol Trust Company was appointed guardian of Arthur W. Gillam and Helen B. Gillam, minor children of E. William Gillam, late of Langhorne.

In the case of William Deffinghan vs. Martha V. Berry, under the will of Martha Deehan, late of Newtown, the executor was directed to pay the plaintiff $1,000 and in case of death to pay the heirs the sum of $250 in equal shares.

Judge Ryan is holding his first Civil Court this week with no cases that will arouse very much public interest although the parties in interest deem them the most important of the week. Owing to the settlement of the two turnpike cases and the continuance Rosenbaum vs. Hazzard case none of the cases will be very long ones. Judge Telford, of Indiana county, arrived on Tuesday morning and tried two cases in which Judge Ryan had been interested in Court Room No 2.

Cases settled were as follows:

Casper Kasparaites vs. George Kasparaites, assumpsit.

The Peresident and Managers of the Hulmeville Turnpike Road Company vs. The County of Bucks, appeal.

OPINIONS OF THE COURT.

Judge Ryan handed down an opinion written by Judge Staples in the estate of Sarah M. Garren, late of Newtown, dismissing some and sustaining others of the sixteen exceptions to the auditor's report.

Opinion and decree relative to exceptions to auditor's report was handed down by Judge Staples in the estate of Morris O'Neill, late of Yardley, sustaining some and dismissing others.

Opinion and decree was handed down by Judge Staples in the matter of William Deffriban vs. Martha V. Berry in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $250, costs of this action to be paid by him.

LICENSE TRANSFERRED.

The license of the Union Hotel, Morrisville, was transferred from Catharine M. Hellings to Lewis D. Boyer, a former restaurant keeper in Bristol.

Morris Rosenbaum vs. Rowland H. Hazzard, assumpsit.

William Guy vs. Mary D. Yardley.

Harry N. Biehn vs. Henry Grove, appeal.

BUCKS REPUBLICANS ENDORSE ROOSEVELT

In 1905 a glowing Tribute was Paid to the President.

The Grundy organization in Bucks county was heartily in favor of Theodore Roosevelt when Roosevelt was president. On Monday, September 11, 1905, at one of the largest Republican conventions ever held in the county, a set of resolutions was unanimously adopted in which was a plank which was a splendid tribute to the President as a man and as a public official.

The Roosevelt resolution was as follows:

TRIBUTE TO ROOSEVELT.

"We view with the greatest satisfaction and enthusiasm the course of an honest, wise and fearless President, Theodore Roosevelt, a servant who knows no master save Duty, a champion whose counselor is Justice. By enemies he has been described as "a man of war," but no American citizen has ever labored harder for the purpose of averting conflict between nations than he. As peacemaker between capital and labor, and as mediator between two warring nations bent on human slaughter, he has exerted a personal influence never before achieved by any other President. We heartily commend the spirit which actuates all of his deeds—that of a "square deal for all."

Sounds Funny Now.

Jenkintown Times Chronicle.

Reasonably sure is it that Charles Johnson and Joseph R. Grundy, candidates for delegates to the national Republican convention, will be elected with large majorities. They are candidates for the honor of representing the Eighth Congressional District of Pennsylvania in the convention to represent the wishes of their constituents. They prefer to go to the convention not tied up to vote for any particular candidate. This is the usual way of sending delegates to the national convention from this county.

Skippack Transcript.

It is not likely that the Roosevelt sentiment in the county will be much in evidence at the primary election, and Taft will doubtless win handsomely.

Bristol Courier.

For it is a settled fact, beyond cavil, that any elector who voted the Keystone ticket a year ago last fall and refrained from voting any ticket last fall, is barred from receiving either a Republican or a Democratic ticket at the primary election next Saturday.

How ridiculous therefore are the demonstriations for Roosevelt by men who will never have an opportunity to vote for him. As for the crowds at the meetings in the big cities—they prove nothing. Bryan, the perennial, drew just as big four years ago, in fact the former free silver advocate would draw just as big crowds today were he a candidate. And he would have just as good a chance of being elected as does Roosevelt.

Collegeville Independent.

The contest in this county has not been especially exciting on account of a superabundance of activity in behalf of the candidates of either of the political parties. Even the somewhat belated and strenuous efforts of the Republicans who favor the election of delegates who will support Mr. Roosevelt's third-term candidacy for President have apparently not attracted a tremendous amount of interest.

Conshohocken Recorder.

The Roosevelt sentiment in this section does not seem to be as strong as it was a month ago. Many persons who have heretofore declared themselves in favor of the Colonel's candidacy, are now showing little interest.

Boost for Natural Ice.

John P. Reta, president of the Peoples Ice Company and Frank Sibbitt, the manager, attended a dinner given by the Pennsylvania State Advisory Committee of the Natural Ice Dealers Association of America in the hotel Windsor, Philadelphia, on Tuesday evening, and heard suggestions how to improve the natural ice trade. Four hundred retail dealers were present. A. C. Reynolds, of Scranton, was toastmaster.

The principal speakers were, Dr. D. W. Horner, of the Lower Merion Township Board of Health; Professor John C. Sparks, chief water expert for New York City, and Howard W. Cole, national secretary of the association. Both Dr. Horner and Professor Sparks impressed upon the dealers the value of newspaper advertising. Professor Sparks declared that natural ice dealers do comparatively no advertising at all.

Dr. Horner advocated educating the public to the value of natural ice, through the newspapers and health departments. He declared that much of the prejudice against such ice was unfounded and that a typhoid fever epidemic from natural ice was almost an impossibility.

St. Luke 16:20.

What was it made the rich man cry
For Lazarus in his agony?
He had neglected him, but now
But one forgiving touch allow.
No angel, no created thing,
But Lazarus could that water bring.
Ah! Christ's beloved at the gate
Are those we ask for when too late.
Where ever in the world we roam
Love and charity first at home.
Love indeed we can never know
Be kind to those you would have dear
And you will love them, never fear.
Be kind to those who love you not
You will not always be forgot.
In any case whate'er betide
The awful gulf will not divide.
Ah! charity the blessed name
You're blotted from God's book of shame.

Bucks County Club Meets.

The April meeting of the Bucks County Club was fully attended at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gillingham, Clinton avenue, Newark, N. J. The evening was an unusually pleasant one in this rainy season and assured a good attendance of both members and visitors. A. W. Myers, of Newark, called the meeting to order in the absence of president Berkeley Pastorius, of Rahway, and Mrs. A. W. Myers, the newly elected secretary read a beautiful letter of appreciation, from Mrs. J. W. Wright, of Newark, who was the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of flowers at Easter and a postal card shower on her birthday. Mrs. Wright has been seriously ill for many months and her cheerful greetings at the club have been greatly missed.

Howard Gillingham proved himself an able entertainer in his excellent rendition of "St. Peter at the Gate." A letter of sympathy was framed and sent to Mrs. John Bennett of East Orange, owing to the recent death of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Large.

The humorous monologue given by Phillip Watson, of Elizabeth, was thoroughly enjoyed. M. F. Tomlinson, without whose clever, pithy stories the club would never be the same, had his usual large collection of amusing experiences to tell. This time it dealt with a recent tour of inspection, a black cat and the fatal number thirteen.

Mrs. Albert Y. Tomlinson was the last entertainer of the evening and gave a most interesting and instructive paper on her spring travels through South Carolina, Georgia and Washington. Her description of her visit to a cotton mill at Aiken, Georgia, where she saw it go through all the processes from the crude state to the woven material, her inspection of the military field, her presence at an immersion at a colored Baptist church in Georgia, her attendance at McKinley's church in Washington to unexpectedly hear a political anti-Roosevelt discourse were all listened to with much attention.

Mrs. Gillingham, the cordial hostess, extended an invitation to the dining room where a beautifully decorated, well filled and most heartily appreciated table awaited her guests.

The next meeting of the club will be held on May ninth at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thomas Smith, of Elizabeth, and the following entertainers have been appointed: Alfred M. Myers, of Newark; Mrs. William Henry Allen Austin, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. Samuel Berkeley Pastorius, of Rahway.

School ior Railroaders' Orphans.

General notices calling attention to the fact that the name of the St. John's Orphanage, 1722 Rittenhouse street, Philadelphia Pa., has been changed to the John Edgar Thomson school have been sent out by the superintendents of the various divisions of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The privileges of the John Edgar Thomson school are for the daughters of employes who have been killed while in the discharge of their duty in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and its affiliated lines.

The John Edgar Thomson school was endowed by John Edgar Thomson, late President of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It is for girls who are taken under agreement with the mother or guardian and, free of charge, given a plain education, including household work, cooking and sewing.

ENDED HIS LIFE WITH RAT POISON

"I will die before I will go to the poor house."

This was the sentiment expressed by James King, an old character who lived with his wife on Otter street, and he made good his threat by committing suicide last Friday evening.

King and his wife lived in two rooms on Otter street, and it had been arranged to take the feeble husband to the county home on Monday. He protested and declared he would never go.

"Jemmie," as he was familiarly called, was a native of the North of Ireland, and formerly made good wages as a carpet weaver. He was 63 years old, and of late had been in feeble health and had no means of support.

While his wife was absent from their little home on Friday afternoon "Jemmie" obtained a can of Rough on Rats and fed the poison to himself with a spoon.

When the wife returned she found her husband lying across the bed, not yet unconscious. He told her what he had done. Dr. Collins was summoned.

Jimmie told the physician that he had taken rat poison because he was tired of life and did not want to go to the poorhouse. The doctor did all he could but at 7.45 p. m. the old man passed away.

Deputy Coroner Rue viewed the remains and from the evidence was satisfied that it was a plain case of suicide.

The funeral was held on Monday interment being made at the Bristol cemetery. Besides his wife the deceased leaves a married daughter.

"The Devil" is Coming.

Franz Molnar's epoch making play which comes to the Riverside Theatre, Bristol, Saturday evening, April 20th, tells a most absorbing story and yet it is a story of every day life. The peculiarity of the play is that it is a comedy and yet is not a comedy—and a tragedy and yet not a tragedy. The Devil, is bubbling over with ironical humor, he amuses by his cynical exposures of the weaknesses of human nature; and yet through it all his persistant heartless temptation of those who have come under his spell reveals the inherant tragedy of human life. The wonderful, cleverness of the play, the remarkable handling of the humanized Satanic character, the soul stirring, heart reaching story of a human struggle against temptation, and the final defeat of "the man" and "the woman" comes as a surprise, a revelation. It is something new in dramatic literature. There is nothing with which to compare it. It stands alone as a dramatic masterpiece. The greatest. the most subtle the most soul stirring play of the decade, is the universal press verdict. This declaration is echoed by the clergy, many of whom went to condemn and came away praising the great moral lesson the play teaches.

Heard on the Street.

I have voted the Republican ticket for forty years but never again as long as there is a "gang" candidate on it. —A. E. Baylies.

I don't know who was the most surprised at the result of the election, Mr. Grundy or myself—Byran C. Foster.

Constable Sues the County.

An amicable action has been brought by Edmund Mason, constable of Morrisville, against the county of Bucks to determine what compensation is allowed constables by law for making returns to court.

Constable Mason was paid $2.50 per diem without mileage and claims $1.50 and mileage at 6 cents per circular mile, which would have paid him $3.12.

The parties agreed to this action for an opinion of court in the nature of a special verdict.

Celebrated 87th Anniversary.

Mrs. Alfred Devoe, of Washington street, Bristol. celebarated her 87th birthday anniversary on Monday evening. Many friends and relatives gathered in honor of the occasion. Those present were: Mr. Alfred Devoe, Mrs. George Booth, Miss Mary Devoe, William Devoe, Martin Devoe, Lewis Devoe, William Devoe, Jr., Charles Devoe, Mrs. Martin Devoe, Miss Florence Devoe, A. R. Tice, Mrs. A. R. Tice, Miss Julia Tice, Miss Nellie Tice, Miss Annie Tice, Miss Bertha Tice, John Banes, Mrs. John Banes, Albert Stout, Mrs. Albert Stout, Miss Elsie Clarkson, of Germantown.

How Gazette Ads. Pay.

The Gazette is undoubtedly the best advertising medium in this section of the county. Testimony from advertisers prove that fact. Every week there come to this office notice of the great efficiency of the Gazette columns to produce results.

This week William H. Brown, of the R. F. D., route writes: "Please discontinue my ad. of asparagus plants in your paper, as I have sold them all through that advertising."

The manager of the Boston Sample Shoe Store, of Bristol, said Wednesday: "Save me space for a quarter of a page ad. for next week as I am going to confine my advertising to the Gazette. It is the only medium here that produces results."

The Gazette guarantees the largest circulation of any newspaper in Bucks county with the exception of one county seat paper and we push that pretty close.

Colonel Watterson calls Colonel Roosevelt a "hell-roaring"—whatever that is. At any rate no one has ever accused T. R. of cooing like a dove.
Or bleating like a lamb.
Or quacking like a duck.
Or making a noise like a rabbit.

BERRY TO SPEAK HERE ON SUNDAY

Former State Treasurer William H. Berryy, of Chester, will address the men's meeting at the Bristol Baptist church on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock. Rev. Lambert, of Philadelphia, will be the soloist.

The organizer and leader of the men's meetings, Rev. Johnston. is still confined to his room, but is slowly regaining his health. During Mr. Johnston's illness for the past four weeks, the meetings have been taken charge of by the pastor's son, Dallus Johnston. Mr. Johnston feels truly grateful for the hundreds of expressions of sympathy that have been extended him and for the presentation of so many flowers from friends and from other Bristol churches.

Rosetty-Leone Wedding.

An Italian wedding of great importance among the sons and daughters of sunny Italy located in Bristol, took place in Pythian Hall last week when when Miss Grace Leone and James Rosetty, both of Bristol, were married by Father Orlando, rector of the Italian Catholic church here. Mario Durso and Mrs. Durso, of Philadelphia, acted as best man and brides-maid. This was the first Italian wedding ever held in a public hall in Bristol and a big time was had. The hall was beautifully decorated and guests were present from Baltimore, Philadelphia, Trenton, Bristol and other places. Music was furnished by an orchestra and brass band from Philadelphia. Samuel Rosetty, brother of the groom, was manager, John Russ was floor manager for the dancing, James Squillace attended to the door, and John Smith looked after the wants of the inner man.

Township Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given Miss Pearl Ray in honor of her sixteenth birthday at her home, Bristol township, last Saturday evening. About forty of her young friends from Bristol and elsewhere gathered about 8 p. m., and enjoyed the evening with music and games until a late hour.

Among those present were Miss Emily Brown, Miss Cora Warner, Leonard Fenton, John Gorman, William Lamon, Edward Hendricks, Earnest Brown, John Rea, Miss Dora Allen, Miss Ethel Smith, Miss Marion Peters, Miss Nellie Pursell, Miss Edith Woolman, Miss Anna Brannigan, all of Bristol, Miss Nellie Ray, William Ray, Miss Pearl Ray, Miss Louise Huddleson, Miss Ella Huddleson, Miss Edna Hoffner, Miss Louise Hoffner, Master Elva Hoffner, of Bayville, and Miss Mary Neeley, John Tait and Thomas Farquahar, of Philadelphia.

Card of Thanks.

The Death of a Child.

Master Alfred M. Larson, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Larson, departed this life April 11th, 1912, very suddenly of diptheria.

A bud the gardener gave us, a pure and lovely child; he gave it to our keeping, to cherish undefiled.

But just as it was opening, to the glory of the day, down came the heavenly gardener, and took our bud away.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

An Outraged Republican.

Mr. Editor:—I wish to tell you my experience at our primary election last Saturday in the First ward, of Bristol, where I live, and am a councilman serving my second term, elected on the Republican ticket.

I am a life long resident here, and have always voted the National Republican ticket but sometimes cut our local ticket, to vote for the man best fitted for the office. I think all men should have that right.

Last Saturday I went to the polls to vote, as I always have done. Before going I heard I was to be challenged as my name was on a list made up by our Postmaster. So when I asked for a Republican ballot I was challenged on party lines, by our County Treasurer, who lives in this ward. I told the Judge my standing in regards to being a Republican. I was refused a ballot unless I would swear or affirm that I had voted for the majority of the candidates on the Republican ticket at the last local election, which I would not do. There were about twelve others of this ward, all good citizens and property owners, like myself, challenged, too. Some voted, but the majority did not.

I went back to the polls in the evening and very soon a man came in and asked for a Republican ballot, who had a saloon in the First ward, but who had moved from the ward about the first of April. His was handed a Republican ballot without any question and voted it. After he had voted I asked him where he lived, he told me in the presence of our County Treasurer and Election officers that he resided in the Third ward. Before leaving the polls I was told by our Postmaster that I could now vote if I wanted to. I told him there were not enough men in the room to make me vote.

I think it very hard when a property owner, councilman and Republican cannot vote his party's ticket. Italians and colored people are given the right to vote for delegates who will nominate a President.

I have voted the Republican ticket for forty years and I think it a petty small law that permits an interpretation that disfranchises me, and I think it is time for the American people to wake up and make laws to give them the right to vote direct for President and Senators.

Rotten Politics in Bucks.

Editor Gazette:—As Gibboney said in his speech in Bristol two years ago before a large audience, "Talk about Philadelphia politics, McNichols, Durhams and others, they are rotten to the core, but not a patch to Grundy politics in Bucks county."

Some Bristol people thought this a crude assertion, but last Saturday's delegate election proved Grundy's politics to be all that Gibboney claimed.

The postmaster with his henchmen swarmed the First ward polling place, and men with protective liquor licenses assisted in the challenging. William K. Fine, of the First ward, and John J. Kilcoyne, of the Third ward, took their orders from the Bosses and challenged Bristol's best citizens, Grundy himself taking part, thus stopping over 100 votes in Bristol. Not only those that were challenged for not voting a straight gang ticket at last election were stopped, but by the spreading of the news, many feared the humiliation of the gang's nefarious measures and stayed away from the polls.

Independents were challenged when asking for a Republican ballot on the grounds that they had not voted a majority of the Republican ticket at the last election. "Pete" Minster, postmaster, threatened to do this and carried his threats into effect.

Dr. Joseph Stradling was handed a ticket by the election officer and later received a challenge from the Judge who ordered a constable to arrest him if he attempted to vote, which resulted in having the ticket snatched from his hands, conduct which might have created serious trouble.

Some of those challenged were Emil Erthal, druggist; A. E. Baylies, jeweler; Dr. Joseph Stradling, Robert E. King, Republican councilman; Serrill Douglass, druggist; Joseph S. Thomas, John Wilkinson, Roy Tracy, Samuel Pearson, Serrill Detlefson, Thomas Harper, Walter F. Leedom, David Landreth and others, all National Republicans. Grundy and his party met their defeat in Bucks and Montgomery counties mostly at the hands of their own party, who must have become disgusted with Grundyism or a monarchy government by the Bucks county plutocrat.

The Eclipse of Cupid

Love Balked to Aid Plans of a Woman Reporter

By ZOE HARTMAN

Senator Howland isn't at home to callers this evening ma'am"

Anne Cullom produced a smile of ingratiating sweetness "But my business isn't of ordinary business, she said confidentially

He said it wouldn't be disturbed on any account

A prying servant couldn't have been more polite she observed pensively

And I had such confidence, too, in the efficacy of my smile! She seated herself on the front steps of Senator Howland's country home and looked around her dejectedly I suppose that old scrub apple is a reporter in my eye I see the sheriff is are under suspicion since I broke had the idiocy to misquote his senatorship in the Post It's a crime to make a politician gun shy Well if I was a fool to come Rafferty was certainly a fool to send me

Descending the steps, she tiptoed around the house reconnoitering

There couldn't be some way of access to the house of Howland,' she argued craning her neck up at the unexpressive windows 'I suppose I might as well take a snapshot of the place while there's daylight left."

She started to get her camera from the touring car she had left in the road but suddenly it stopped, and her head went up like a hound that scents the quarry Voices surely—voices from within She stole back into the shadows of the piazza

But papa you said —

Never mind what I said I tell you young Bruce is out of the question His father's my political enemy, for one thing and for another, you're too young for such nonsense Drop it!"

But papa you didn't object to George at first

Now Betty —the deep, resonant voice within sharpened with exasperation— 'really you don't do the least good at this time of all times when I'm worried gray with other matters I simply won't listen to your marrying at seventeen Come to me two years hence six when there's some likelihood of your knowing your own mind.

I do know my own mind" The girl shrilled a piercing nasal quality I think it's perfectly horrid of you to say such mean things about George'

Lower your voice Betty Your mother is resting for the first time today and that clack of yours will get her nerves jumping again You're acting like a spoiled baby Now listen to reason I suppose you're dazzled by the prospect of becoming daughter in law to the biggest mining king in the state I had hoped my girl would have sense enough to prefer brains to money but it seems she hasn't However let that pass The main point is an alliance with old George Germaine

"I MUST SEE SENATOR HOWLAND"

Brackett's family just at this time would seriously cripple me politically You can't understand how —

I won't listen Hers predominated in the voice now And I won't have my life ruined just for your horrid old politics

Anne plumped down on the floor of the piazza and rocked to and fro in silent ecstasy

She stole around the house once more revolving vague splendid ideas of a Pinkerton-esque entrance somewhere in the rear when suddenly a shaft of light shot out into the fast deepening gloom from a window above

In a short time the blind was raised a trifle a long white scarf was unfolded to the caprice of the wind and made fast to the window sill by dropping the sash on it After what seemed to Anne an interminable period of waiting a man's figure glided out of the woods from the quarter of the road and passed within a stone's throw of her covert with steady upward gaze centered upon the marked window Creeping across the lawn, he tossed a handful of pebbles against the pane

A brief moment of suspense then the light went out in the upper room a hand pulled in the scarf and the window slid up a few cautious inches There was some low toned parleying, then the man strode around the rear of the house and disappeared Somewhere a door was softly opened and shut Anne hugged herself and fidgeted. Ah, there they were at last! The two figures, hand in hand issued from the shadows back of the house

"Where did you leave the auto, George?" was wafted to her in panting breaths as they whisked past

'Down the hill in that first hollow Hanson's waiting for us," explained this gallant Lochinvar, and off they went on the trot. In a trice Anne was darting along the path toward her touring car at the gate.

"Skeleton's out of the closet!" she giggled beneath her breath What would you give, Mr Andrew Howland, to have me chase it back?' She paused irresolutely, glancing back

"Oh, well, my lord, since you won't grant me my interview I must content myself with your angel child's elopement. Here goes!"

She was about to leap into the car, but stopped short with a cry of dismay "The gasoline! Oh, perdition, I forgot! I ought to have filled it. Now, where's that can?"

Groping frantically in the back of the car, she finally extracted from the chaos of the tool kit a can of gasoline and began an impetuous assault upon its stopper The next moment she was crouching low in the shadow of the car, for her ear had caught the scurry of returning footsteps and the murmur of excited voices, which seemed to indicate that the course of true love was still running in jerks

"Oh, George, are you sure you told him to wait there? came the girl's agitated voice "Dear, dear, what shall we do if he's drunk again and gone back to town?"

"I'll break his cursed head for him when I catch him!" fumed George

'Dear what if papa should come?" moaned Miss Howland "George we'll have to walk to the city Come on, it's only four miles Why—why, there it is! There's the car at the gate Why didn't we look there before? Run quick!"

It was not in Anne Cullom to hesitate when action was possible She scrambled to her feet and composing her features to accommodate an expression of mild and seraphic astonishment, faced the fugitives serenely as they came panting up With a smothered shriek Miss Betty promptly backed into the arms of Mr George Germaine Brackett Jr

"Tisn't yours at all, George!" she gasped

"Good evening said Anne sweetly 'Is anything the matter?"

"We've—we've lost a motorcar!" Wo manlike, Miss Betty was the first to recover It was to wait for us, but I'm afraid the chauffeur's misunderstood and gone off without us and we simply must get to town tonight Oh won't you let us have your car? George will pay you anything you ask—anything Won't you, George?

George stood to his guns valiantly Yes and I'll have a man bring it back to you the minute we get to town You will have it back in half an hour"

That sounds straight," admitted Anne cautiously, 'but you never can tell I never lend my car to any but persons of—er—acknowledged good character That was a good one for Rafferty,' she added mentally It was Rafferty's car

'Jump in Betty well take it anyway" The groom was already laying possessive hands on the motor

I seem to have no choice Anne was enjoying herself tremendously

Anne watched them till they were well under way feeling very much as though she had at last found a lever long enough to swing the world Then she flew back to the house and gave the front bell a violent pull

"I must see Senator Howland instantly! Do you hear—instantly? It's a matter of life and death!"

Her vehemence must have carried conviction, for the aperture of the door widened a cautious six inches and the stolid domestic backed off a few feet in ungracious invitation Suddenly from the far end of the hall a deep, testy voice boomed out 'A matter of life and death eh? Humph! What's a matter of life and death?'

Anne's heart pounded a little unevenly as she stepped forward and confronted the man whose name was on everybody's lips

My name is Anne Cullom' She went straight to the point 'I hate to butt in but I thought you'd like to know that your daughter is about to elope with a young man she calls George'

'My daughter! What the devil—what do you know about it, ma'am?"

"I was there and saw it, you see They couldn't find their motorcar, so they took mine' said Anne

'Took your motorcar The lion was now thoroughly aroused "Why in blazes did you let 'em do that? Are you crazy'

'I couldn't help myself Your new son in law has such a taking way," aggrievedly He took it forcibly There isn't enough gasoline in the engine to carry them half a mile so we can easily overtake them if you'll call your motor'

'Good Lord I wouldn't have had 'em escape for all the money in the world Are you sure they'll get stranded in your car

Dead sure Her eyes followed him in friendly commiseration as he mopped his damp forehead

I suppose you see no occasion for these hysterics, but there happens to be more at stake than a mere mess of sentiment That young gosling my daughter's eloping with is the son of George Germaine Brackett, president of the Superior Mining Syndicate and head of that big gang of corporation pirates were trying to clean out This is one of the dodges in the game, to get my silly daughter married to his son so they'll have a plausible foundation for their lies about old Andrew Howland's selling out to the syndicate They're taking advantage of my low financial condition"—Anne liked the grim set of his jaw—"to spread the report that I'm to have my debts canceled and a big block of their stock as the price of betrayal. Because I won't talk for the press—the whole perjured reporter gang would rather misrepresent a man's words than not—they pretend to interpret my silence as double dealing. Now that my waste land bill has passed the house I'm raising heaven and earth to put it through the senate and make those fellows pay roundly for all the country their cursed smelter smoke has ruined"

'Senator Howland here's your car" And she assumed the initiative by springing in first

'Do you mean to say," she pursued with disarming guilelessness as he set the big machine in motion "that Miss Howland's marriage to young Brackett could seriously affect the passage of the waste land bill?

Oh, you don't understand!' he shouted irritably above the chugging of the car Why, the fate of that bill hangs on a hair! Aha! Our babes in the woods eh? Down in that hollow Humph! They're shipwrecked fast enough'

Never did stern parent overtake a more forlorn looking runaway couple. Upon the approach of the parental car the valiant groom elect scrambled out of the car where he had been jerking fruitlessly at the motor and, giving it a vengeful parting kick made off down the road at the top of his speed The senator leaped to the ground and looked after the retreating figure of his would be son in law. Then turning mildly to his daughter, W[illegible] didn't think you were really in about leaving me"

"It was a horrid, hateful trick bed Miss Betty, trying to [illegible] Anne with a look, while su[illegible] being bundled into the buck[illegible] big car, where she wept [illegible] the way home Not so the [illegible]

"Miss Anne Cullom, shall I [illegible] bluntly as he handed her [illegible] front steps "You've done [illegible] ice I shan't forget very [illegible] though I don't know your n[illegible] grateful just the same and only this fool daughter of mine W[illegible] grateful too Temporarily I am at [illegible] service"

Anne pulled herself togeth[illegible] for a great plunge 'There's only [illegible] you can do for me," she [illegible] masterly diffidence, "and that [illegible] talking about your fight with [illegible] porations I'm a reporter [illegible] Evening Telegraph— There, th[illegible] take it so hard"

"A reporter! he groaned [illegible] her, his jaw dropping 'A n[illegible] scandal for the morning p[illegible]

'Well," eying him compos[illegible] a man of your position I [illegible] you are the stupidest. A real [illegible] politician would be casting [illegible] a strong inducement to keep [illegible] and he wouldn't be long find[illegible] ther Do you suppose that I [illegible] here for such small fry as your [illegible] ter's elopement?'

"Which one of those misinf[illegible] bureaus did you say you came [illegible] he growled after a brief struggle

"The Telegraph not the Post I was sent here to interview [illegible] political issues and particularly [illegible] waste land bill Your servant [illegible] —unkind enough to refuse me [illegible] tance this afternoon but of course [illegible] knew nothing about that."

"Um m—the Telegraph, It's [illegible] paper eh? Well Rafferty's a [illegible] clean chap—pretty clean Got a [illegible] good bump of courage too Still —

I swear I'll quote you exactly [illegible] cisely and mathematically right [illegible] Anne in a burst of enthusiasm [illegible] it takes a leg'

"Come into the library Miss [illegible] Cullom" he exploded yielding to [illegible] great guffaw You shall have [illegible] interview By George, you've [illegible] it!"

"JUMP IN, BETTY WE'LL TAKE IT ANYWAY," SAID GEORGE.

Whistler's Tart Comment

Whistler one afternoon called a young painter of his acquaintance who did the pretty little sort of things that are popular In the course of the conversation that followed the young artist turned to a little head he was painting and, daintily balancing a square palette by one corner between two finger tips, took a fine sable brush and as daintily began to tickle a piece of bad drawing into a "sweet expression,' saying

"A pleasant art, ours, isn't it Jimmy?'

'Yes" was Whistler's response but what are you doing Frank?"

"Oh said the young artist, 'I am painting a replica of a little thing some one liked because, you know, I can always sell two or three of the same subject, if it's a taking one"

'Ah!' commented Whistler, 'you must be a genius, Frank and I, I am like the simple minded hen who when asked to do so, protested that she could not lay the same egg twice
